You don't need to flirt with the waitress because she is the actress you slept with two years ago.

In a town made up of transplants and implants, where devils never sleep and a drug score is like a trip to the ATM, one would assume that everyone has a story to tell. Well, within that thick layer of guilt that LA holds above her – call it smog, call it sin – something ain't right and good or bad, real or fad, you'll read about the rotting souls that live among the streets that are paved with gold.

Truth and fiction become a blur in this collection of 32 Los Angeles based authors – including an early 80s commentary by the late Charles Bukowski. All of these authors have placed their own spin onto the culture that is so uniquely LA. From sinfully delicious tales of murder to porn and drugs to love, you'll read everything you ever thought you never wanted to know about this town.

Put your plastic surgeon on hold, fire up the Range Rover and become a part of this capitalist, commercial, celebrity obsessed, self-indulgent community that we all call home.

Sleeping with Snakes is our “series-brand”  [www.sleepingwithsnakes.com ]. We compile collections of short stories from new, up and coming authors in the vein of Bukowski, Fante, Hammett, Welsh, Capote, Hemmingway, et al. We choose a city and find authors that are based there - the stories don't really need to be set there, but the authors usually are (or have spent a considerable time there).

The goal is to capitalize on the uniqueness of major cities around the globe and collect a moment in time with its citizens, writers and their stories. Imagine Sleeping with Snakes [Vol. 7]: Notes from the Bangkok Underbelly... New York City, New Orleans, Seattle, Chicago and more! We feel that this style resonates with the inner community as well as interested parties outside of the local area. There are no real guidelines that our books adhere to - although most of the stories we select are of sub-culture interest; greed, drugs, relationships, drinking, true crime, gutters, thievery, cheating, lying, stealing etc. - You may find a selection from an unpublished novel or an excerpt from an old screen play that never saw the light of day. You might even read a story that was written solely for a certain volume. Nothing is set in stone.

Orange Labs.

We're now slated for Volume 2 where Seattle will be our focus. It will be out in April or May of 2010 with a potential release party at the Musiquarium inside the Triple Door.

Of all the reasons we created this anthology, these are but a few...

- The short attention span of people today is ideally suited to the short story format.
- There is a fascination with Hollywood and the greater Los Angeles area. Interest follows the people that live there and the stories they live.
- And of course, when we tried looking for collections based on city specific authors, we came up empty handed. This series will fill that void (other cities around the world will see their own volume in the coming years).

The anthologist on the project was Ron Sievers who is from Chicago, IL. and now resides in Seattle, WA. His love of literature, music and all things left-of-center led him to conceive and develop the series, Sleeping with Snakes: Notes from the Underbelly. He compiled Vol. 1 while living in Los Angeles between 2001 and 2004. Ron is currently working on Sleeping with Snakes [Vol. 2], which will be set in Seattle and will be out in 2010. In his spare time, Ron Sievers also runs Orange Recordings  a record label: [www.orangerecordings.com ].

The cover art was drawn by Marcellus Hall  [www.marcellushall.com ] an established illustrator from NYC with pieces printed in the Los Angeles Times, Entertainment Weekly, The New Yorker, GQ, SPIN and many more.
